

Albert K. Alikin, a partner in the firm's Global Insurance Services, Corporate Services and Commercial Litigation, General Liability, Management and Professional Liability, and Appellate teams, is a highly experienced litigator who focuses his practice on defending bad faith claims and handling complex insurance coverage disputes involving E&O, D&O, fidelity, EPLI, automobile/UIM, property, cyber, and CGL policies. Al has prevailed in trial and appellate courts throughout California and across the nation. He has also represented a wide variety of clients such as insurance brokers, agents, and third-party administrators in professional liability actions. His extensive coverage experience spans many industries including banking and financial services, commercial and residential real estate, construction, home and auto, education, energy, entertainment and film, government, health care, hospitality, manufacturing, and special events. Additionally, he has substantial experience litigating toxic tort, general liability, and breach of contract actions.

Al provides comprehensive insurance coverage and litigation counsel to regional, national, and global insurers. He has an outstanding record of successfully representing clients in a variety of matters ranging from high-exposure bad faith claims to lawsuits alleging personal injury and property damage. In the realm of business and commercial litigation, Al has represented clients such as international insurance brokers, online retailers, rare antique collectors, and beverage manufacturers on matters ranging from professional negligence claims to misrepresentation and false claims, false advertising and unfair competition, and breach of contract.

A widely recognized authority on insurance topics, Al has authored numerous articles and publications on insurance coverage litigation, and is a frequent contributor to organizations such as the DRI and the ABA.

Prior to attending Loyola Law School, where he was the recipient of the American Jurisprudence and First Honors Award as well as the Lim Ruger and Kim Scholarship Award, Al earned his bachelor's in Political Science from the University of California, San Diego. While at Loyola, he served as president of the Business Law Society, and was also an editor for the Loyola International and Comparative Law Review.