

Bryce J. Adams, Esq.,
Insurance Litigation Associate at Bullivant Houser, PC

Bryce Adams has practiced law across the gamut of public and private sectors, representing clients as diverse as flagship insurance carriers, city governments, state agencies, software startups, and multinational manufacturers. From these diverse experiences, he understands that the true unifying feature across all litigation is client service: communication, responsiveness, and sensitivity to the unique conditions that constitute a “win” for each individual client in their hour of need.

For the past six years, his practice has focused on the rights of parties involved in insurance disputes, including both carriers and policyholders. Super Lawyers has ranked him a Rising Star for three years running, and he is a core member of the insurance law group at Bullivant Houser, one of the West Coast’s preeminent insurance defense firms. Bryce specializes in cutting-edge issues in first-party bad faith litigation, along with catastrophic regionwide loss events like the 2020 Pacific wildfire season and COVID-19 business interruption claims.

Outside the office, Bryce and his wife are avid world travelers, particularly for exotic hiking locales like Malaysia, Colombia, and Ethiopia. Along the way, he has become a contributor to more wildlife preservation and animal welfare charities than he ever imagined joining back in law school.