Overview

Tom Cellilli is a trial lawyer and coverage attorney who focuses on complex property and product liability claims. He represents major first-party property insurers in coverage actions and arbitrations, or trial litigation throughout the United States. He also handles consumer and industrial product liability litigation, pursuing subrogation for insurers or defending manufacturers, brokers, distributors and property owners in cases of catastrophic loss of property, personal injury or life throughout the United States.

Tom is a recognized leader in defending cases of arson for profit. His knowledge of fire science and the intricacies of NFPA 1033 and NFPA 921 give him unique perspective on expert witness qualifications and the scientific method. He has advanced training in statement and behavioral symptom analysis.

Tom has experience in fire and explosion cases involving sophisticated industrial equipment involving dust, ammonia and electrostatics.

He is invited to speak, as an arson expert, at conferences nationwide such as the International Association of Special Investigation Units and Insurance Fraud Management Conference through the Insurance Services Office (ISO) and the International Association of Arson Investigators National and New York Chapter, Property Loss Research Bureau and the Claims and Litigation Management Alliance.
