

Cassandra R. Cole began her career as an auto claims representative for State Farm Insurance in 1995. After two years, she returned to school and obtained her PhD from the University of Georgia. In 2001, she obtained a position at Florida State University.

Cassandra is currently the Chair of the Risk Management/Insurance, Real Estate and Legal Studies Department and the Dr. William T. Hold Professor in Risk Management and Insurance. She also serves as the Director of the Master of Science in Risk Management and Insurance Program. Cassandra teaches courses at both the undergraduate and graduate level, with a focus in the area of employee benefits. Since beginning her academic career, she has published nearly 50 articles in a variety of outlets including the Journal of Risk and Insurance, the North American Actuarial Journal, the Journal of Insurance Issues, the Risk Management and Insurance Review, the Journal of Insurance Regulation, the CPCU eJournal, the Journal of Financial Service Professionals, and Best's Review. Her primary areas of research include retirement planning, insurance regulation, corporate governance, and health insurance.

In addition, Cassandra has received recognition for both her research and teaching and is an active member of a number of academic, educational, and industry organizations. She currently serves as co-editor of the Journal of Insurance Regulation and is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Financial Service Professionals.